And last, but not least: Participants do not need to start at the same time. It is possible to continuously sign up new learners and form learning tandems.

c) Role of the Tutor

Technical Tutor and Course Tutor

There are two types of tutor present in the course:

1. A technical tutor who provides technical help and support on computer-specific and Moodle-platform-specific issues.
2. A course tutor who moderates and supports the learning process.

It is not the job of the project to describe the role and function of an online tutor. However, the following general guidelines should be taken into consideration:

1. Apart from workshops 5 and 6, the tutor is not supposed to give direct feedback, answers or explanations. Instead – if required - s/he rather provides motivation, help and support on how to solve a problem.
2. The main supporting task of the tutor is to keep motivation of the participants going (the means differ from learner to learner and tandem to tandem).
3. Tutors are present. That means they are available, take little time to react, take little time to act (if necessary), and overall: communicate.

Tutors can either be assigned to a workshop or to learning tandems. Both approaches have their advantages and disadvantages:
